“ Mike Bellini posted a condolence Dear Dad,
You've only been gone for a little bit but it feels like an eternity. I wake up thinking that it was all just a dream and that I'll be going downstairs to see you in your rocker watching t.v., with your big ole headphones on. It's hard dad; knowing that I'm going to go downstairs and not see you there. I miss you so much it hurts inside.

You were a great man and I never gave you the credit you deserved. Too many times I would come downstairs and get ready to go out somewhere and you would stop me and ask me about my day. Sometimes I would stop, go over and sit on the couch and tell you about it. You always sat there with a smile on your face whenever we sat together and talked. And even though I'm grown up now you'd sit there and give me little tid bits of advice if the topic was something that I was struggling with.

It wasn't that long ago that we were working together, on the same shift and every morning we would sit at the table eating breakfast together and you would ask me what my team was planning to do that day at work. And you always listened to me ramble on about my job and give me advice afterwards on what I could do.

I miss those talks dad. If I knew then what I know now I would have held onto those little talks as long as I possibly could. You always wanted what was best for me, and everytime I had a good day and I told you about it you always had the biggest smile on your face. You were in so much pain inside but knowing that I had a good day always seemed to make you feel better yourself. Everytime I had a bad day you always said you were sorry about it but there was never anything to be sorry about because it wasn't your fault. For as long as I could remember you were always like that. You were always so selfless. It's like you didn't care about yourself you cared about us way more. You were always like that. No matter what you would always put us before you no matter what the situation was. A lot of times I was blind to it and I took it for granted. I wish you were here right now so I could give you a big hug and say thank you; and to tell you that I love you.

Unfortunately I didn't say those things enough to you. You were a man in my life, that ignored everything inside of you just to make sure that no matter what I was happy, that I had whatever I needed and more importantly whatever I wanted. You were a real father not just someone who holds the title. You truly are someone to look up to and aspire to be.

You had your pitfalls but everyone has them, but realistically the good inside of you outweighs any pitfall ten to one. I won't forget any of the things that you taught me growing up. You gave me some of the best memories for my childhood that a kid could ask for. You truly were a great father and I wish you were here right now so I could tell you that.

I miss you so much dad and I will never stop missing you. I know that you're up there in heaven now watching over me and just like when you were here you always wanted what was best for me you want that now as well. I just want you to know dad that I love you and that I've always loved you. I know I didn't say it very often but it's true. Thank you for everything you have ever done for me. You did a lot, way more than anyone should but no matter what you never gave up on me. Until the day comes that we meet again may you rest now. I love you dad, goodnight.

*Love always and forever,
Mike*

“ Scott Bellini lit a candle In memory of my father, Arthur L. Bellini. Dad, I love you and you are very missed. You were there for me everyday of my life and taught me what it means to take care of a family. It wasn't always easy going but you and mom always provided what we needed. I can't believe that I won't be seeing you sitting on your rocker anymore when I come home from work. You always wanted to know how work went and I should have taken more time to tell you.

I am so grateful for all the times we did spend together. The hockey games, the baseball games the movies. You are a special man and no one will ever be able to fill the void that is left behind. Every star shines bright until it's time for its lite to fade. Your light had to fade in this life to shine in the next. We will see each other again, and for that I am eternally grateful, for death is not the end just the beginning. You fought the fight, now sleep the sleep of this world and rise in the next. I know Nonnie is waiting there for you and so is Grandpa. Until we all meet again, I hope you know how much I love you. Good bye dad.
