Christine Davis was born in May of 1960, in Beth Israel Hospital in New York to the late Chrysoberyl Blaine Young-Bradley and the late Earl T. Bradley. Christine was of both American and Jamaican parentage, and respected and celebrated both aspects of her heritage. She lived in New York with her parents for most of her early childhood before relocating to Zambia, Central Africa, at the age of 7. Here, she would live with many of her younger nieces and nephews under the care of her elder sister, Norma Jean, for several years. The family would thrive in this beautiful country before relocating again to Jamaica; it was there that Christine would spend the remainder of her childhood and enter into Secondary School as a teenager. She would finally return to New York as a young adult before entering University at the age of 20.

This next phase of her life would be marked by many changes, as she would start her family, becoming a mother of 4 to share her home with her son Kenneth and three wonderful daughters, Andrea, Maria and Kristal. This was also the time when Christine's journey into her Faith would be begin; she would become a Witness to Jehovah, and devoutly serve her community for over 40 years. Her strong faith would connect her with many spiritual brothers and sisters and be passed down to her children and many grandchildren. Never one daunted by challenges, her faith would also see Christine through one of her many degrees, a Masters in Banking.

Having left her mark on the paths of finance and family, Christine would embark on her next phase of life as a dutiful and loving wife. Having met her Husband, James Davis, in the early 2000s, the two would wed in March of 2005. The couple would spend almost 20 blissful years together supporting each other and their family until her journey's end in June of 2023.

Christine was preceded in death by her daughter Kristal Renaé in September 2020 and is survived by her remaining husband, three of her children and many grandchildren, siblings, nieces and nephews and extended Spiritual Family. We all remember her for her warmth, organization, wisdom, quirky sense of humor, dedication and of course, her boundless sweetness and unshakable faith in her God, Jehovah.
