

Jane Wilson

July 19, 1958 - March 23, 2025

Jane was born into a proud military family. Tragically her father died active duty when she was 5. She grew up on a tree lined street in Freeport where she spent countless hours playing with all the neighborhood children. She went on to graduate from Freeport High School. While she was in high school she took a job as waitress at the East Bay Diner in Oceanside. She loved it. Later on she became a bartender. She had a huge following at Sonny's Canal House in Baldwin. She loved everything about boating and fishing. She spent a lot of time enjoying summer nights on the Nautical Mile. She always looked forward to seeing her friends at the Freeport Festival and the annual bayhouse Thanksgiving dinner. She was adored by her niece and nephew's. She showered them with candy and gifts whenever she saw them. In 2014 her mother passed away. This was an enormous loss for her that she never really recovered from. Jane's passing will leave a hole in the hearts of her family.

“ Just as everybody else who knew her, Jane was a wonderful young lady, we spoke often, especially when she had problems with her landlord in Long Beach. I would help her by calling the building department to get the heat fixed or other things, I only know Jane less than 10 years and only by Facebook when she and I used to post on Charles Ashton freeport page I know her as a gentle, caring, loving and giving young lady who had wonderful ethics and similar interests as I do, she told me how badly she misses her mother as well as her brother Lauren, I know she has survived by cousins as well as her brother Dean, she told me she never left dirty dishes in the sink, which is very respectable. She learned that from her mom, she wasn't exactly happy with her last roommate and she shared with me stories of why she didn't like her roommate. What a strange because Jane was a very caring and loving person and easy to get along with, we spoke up until about one or two years ago when she had her last surgery, the poor woman she had too many of them and all I can say is Jane you are left. Going to heaven, I will never forget you in the caring and love that we shared. God bless you in heaven rest in peace, Robert Hochstein.
